

I have lived in Europe. I was always proud that American television had higher standards and told my European friends as much. They agreed with me that European tv had fallen to a low and lamented that it was impossible to turn back the clock once the standards were relaxed.